BEAR LAKE TWP. MOVES FORWARD

Bear Lake Township can now nave a new centrally located Township and Community Building, due to the generosity of Art Clough of Art Clough Realty Co. of Grayling. He has deeded a one-acre corner at East Bear Lake Road and Route M-72 to the Township for development as a meeting and recreation center.

-The Improvement Association, working co-operatively with the fownship Board, will sponsor the building and development program. The first unit will be an attractive meeting-and-general-purpose building. It will be largely a "do it yourself project" and an example of co-operative community effort for the common good of all. Later it barbecue unit can be added.

There is also a target and rifle range facility in the planning stage,

In a sharp cutback from last year, the Conservation Department is offering about 143,000 permits for antlerless deer hunting this fall in the 56 special areas shown above. Upon buying 1966 firearm or archery deer licenses, hunters can pick up permit application forms from the Department's Publications Room in Lansing or from some 4,000 dealers throughout the state. They have until September 30 to get their applications completed and postmarked for return mailing to the Department's Lansing office. Sportsmen are reminded that the permits do no guarantee access to private lands within the antlerless deer areas. They will still need the O.K. of owners to hunt on these lands. In applying, they should note that some antlerless deer areas in the northeastern part of the Lower Peninsula and those in southern Michigan are largely made up of private lands. Another point to remember is that Livingston County, which embraces areas 50-53, is closed to Sunday hunting. -- Mich. Dept. of Conservation

Former Resident Dies In Florida Blaze

Mrs. Olive Penrod, in her 70's died last Tuesday morning, Octo-ber 25th in her Sarasota, Florida apartment as the result of a fire. The county medical examiner stated that she had probably died of asphyxiation. Mrs. Penrod with her husband Glen who passed away several years ago, first built and operated Penrod's Cabins on the AuSable River in Grayling.

Pauline McKever, Mrs. Penrod's maid who lived with her, tried to rescue her from her burning bedroom but was unsuccessful. The cause of the blaze was undetermined but the Sarsota Fire Chief said the fire started in or near Mrs. Penrod's bed.

The maid stated that Mrs. Penrod had been ill most of the night and had been out of bed, pacing the floor. The maid told firemen that she had gotten out of bed at 5 a. m. to make coffee for Mrs Penrod. She then lay down and went to sleep. The next thing she remembers is Mrs. Penrod calling

This is the Conservation Department's answer to public outcries over the growing problem of illegal kills during Michigan's deer seasons. It is the state's new deer tag which replaces the old, increasingly mis-used metal scal. The more "cheatproof" tag has this one standard format but bears different colors for different deer licenses (i.e. resident archery, nonresident firearm, etc.). It is designed literally to "cut out" the potential violator's chances of getting away with an illegallykilled deer. Upon downing a deer, the hunter must cut or tear out sections of his tag shown above to specify the date of kill, the sex of his animal and, if a buck, the number of points on its antlers. Conservation officers will enforce this "cut-out" requirement to the "T". In the center space shown above, each successful hunter must also write the location of his kill to help game men pinpoint where whitetails are taken. With the information side facing out, the tag is to be
